Key-words:BrazilianForeignPolicy;Lula'sadministration. The promise of a better and fairer world that would result from the triumph of "Western" political values whatever one means by that and of market economy was not fulfilled. The result, as shown in the figures quoted above, were more than positive: not only did Mercosul as a whole become a larger trading partner for Brazil than the US, but Argentina alone absorbed more Brazilian exports than any other country, except China, in the last few months - a tendency very likely to be maintained.
